RE: Charles Schwab & Co., Inc.

Office of Compliance Inspection and Examinations

Dear Mr. Greely:

Enclosed are an original and two copies of the Form TA-2 for Charles Schwab & Co., Inc. ("Schwab") for the period ending December 31, 2002. This letter serves as a supplement to Schwab's Form TA-2 for 2002 filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC").

Schwab, in its capacity as a registered securities broker, maintains one or more omnibus accounts for the benefit of its customers with each of the 56 Schwab proprietary mutual funds for which Schwab, in its capacity as registered transfer agent, acts as transfer agent. Schwab treats each omnibus account internally as an "individual securityholder account" and had been, until directed otherwise by the SEC staff in 1994, completing the information required on Form TA-2 consistent therewith.

In 1994, in discussions with James Brown, Staff Accountant, Pacific Regional Office, Jack Bruns, Chief of Broker-Dealer Examinations, San Francisco Branch Office, and Ester Saverson, Jr., then Branch Chief, Transfer Agent Regulation, Division of Market Regulation, in Washington, D.C., they requested that Schwab complete the Form TA-2 as if Schwab, as broker, maintains with each Schwab proprietary mutual fund an "individual securityholder account" for each Schwab customer that holds the mutual fund's shares. The staff acknowledged that there are no written instructions or interpretations, which form the basis for its request. Although Schwab has disagreed with the staff's interpretation of Schwab's Form TA-2 reporting requirements, it has completed the Form TA-2 in each year from 1994 through 2000 in accordance with the staff's request. Schwab has supplied such information on the Form TA-2 solely to comply with the staff's request. Moreover, Schwab has not conceded that this reporting convention has any validity with respect to determining the obligations of the Schwab proprietary mutual funds or the rights of Schwab customers owning the mutual fund shares.

In 1999, Schwab engaged Boston Financial Data Services ("BFDS") (84-00896), as a service company, to provide transfer agency services, on behalf of Schwab, and currently provides transfer agency services, for 43 of 56 of our proprietary mutual funds. The transfer agency services include maintaining the master security holder files for these proprietary mutual funds. Consequently, for Schwab's Form TA-2 for 2002, we have completed the form in accordance with the staff's request only for those funds for which we have not engaged BFDS to maintain the master securityholder files ("Non-BFDS Funds").

To assist in the review of Schwab's Form TA-2 for the period ending December 31, 2002, Schwab is providing the following explanations as to certain questions on the form. The information provided below refers to Non-BFDS Funds.

Question 5.a. The number of individual security holder accounts maintained as of December 31, 2002 is the aggregate number of positions held in each Schwab customer's account, as of December 31, 2002. Some customers hold positions in two or more Non-BFDS Funds.

Questions 10.b. Question 10.b. requests the number of mutual fund transactions processed during 2002 on a date other than the date of receipt of order. The response to this question reflects the number of "as of" transactions (7,560,834) in 2002 reported on Schwab customer statements for the requisite time period. "As of" transactions generally arise from Schwab processing VISA/ATM debit transactions in the Schwab One® brokerage accounts that have a money market fund feature. As explained to the SEC staff during its transfer agency examinations of Schwab in 1994, 1998, and 1999, the VISA/ATM debit transactions are processed in the Schwab One customer brokerage accounts on an "as of" basis due to a delay between the time when (a) Schwab advances funds, on behalf of its customers, to the paying bank to cover the debit transactions and (b) Schwab receives a tape of the detailed transactions from the paying bank enabling Schwab to charge the cash assets (including proceeds of redemptions of money market fund shares in accordance with the Schwab One Account Agreement). As a result, transactions are processed on the latter date (b) "as of" the former date (a).

It should be noted, however, that in the situation described above, none of these transactions are "as of" transactions to the Schwab proprietary mutual funds, because Schwab always receives the price next calculated after transmission of the purchase or redemption order to the mutual funds. Schwab assumes the market risk for any price change between the "as of" date and the transmission date of the order and receives the dividends for that time period as well. Schwab is able to process orders in this manner for its customers because it maintains an omnibus account with each Schwab proprietary mutual fund.

Question 11.b. This total number includes individual security holder accounts for Non-BFDS Funds and may also include Schwab customers that had cash credits that were remitted to states during the reporting period.

Very Truly yours,
